DEATH OF A FRENCH STATESMAN.
M. Waddington, ambassador for France at the British Court, is dead.

Men of the Times gives the following notes:—Waddington, William Henry, French statesman and diplomatist, was born in Paris, December 11th, 1826. His father, a rich Englishman, established a cotton works in France, and became naturalized, but the son was educated in England. He went to Rugby School in February, 1841, and remained there till June, 1845, when he went up to Trinity College, Cambridge, with an exhibition from the school. He became Scholar of his college, and graduated in 1849 as second in the first class of the Classical Tripos, and was bracketed equal as Chancellor's Medalist. At Rugby he was distinguished for his prowess at football, and his contemporaries in Cambridge remember Waddington the sculler, member of the Second Trinity Boat Club, and No. 6 in the Cambridge boat in the University race of 1849, when Cambridge won. Soon after leaving the University he settled in France, having, on attaining his majority, personally chosen the nationality adopted by his father. He became a member of the Society of Antiquaries of France, and in the pursuit of his favourite studies relating to ancient coins and inscriptions, he visited Asia Minor (in 1850 and 1862), England, and Germany. His valuable contributions towards the history and archaeology of France led to his being elected, in 1865, a member of the Academy of Inscriptions and Belles Lettres. In that year he endeavoured at a by-election to enter the Corps Legislatif, as member for the fourth constituency of the department of the Aisne, but his candidature was unsuccessful. However, on February 8th, 1871, he was sent as a representative of that department to the National Assembly. At first he sat in the Left Centre, but at the close of the year he withdrew from the constitutional monarchist party, and allied himself to the Republicans, giving a hearty support to the policy of M. Thiers. He was a member of numerous commissions, and was the reporter of the law relating to the Conseils Generaux (August 1871). Appointed Minister of Public Instruction, in the place of M. Jules Simon, May 16th, 1873, M. Waddington retired, five days later, with M. Thiers, and resumed his seat on the benches of the Left Centre. Except on some questions of detail, or rather of procedure, M. Waddington voted regularly with the Republicans. On January 30th, 1876, he was elected a Senator for the department of the Aisne, together with M. Henri Martin and M. Saint-Valler. His term of office expired in 1885. He was recalled to the Ministry of Public Instruction in the Cabinet of March 10th, 1876. In succession to M. Wallon, and he retained his portfolio under the administration of M. Jules Simon, with whom he resigned office May 17th, 1877. On the formation of the Dufaure cabinet in December 1877, M. Waddington became Minister of Foreign Affairs. He was the first Plenipotentiary of France at the Congress of Berlin in 1878. After the resignation of Marshal MacMahon and the retreat of M. Dufaure, M. Waddington was invited by M. Grévy to resign at the Foreign Office while assuming the Presidency of the Council (February 4th 1879). He had in that capacity to maintain before the Parliament a policy which was considered too Republican by the Senate, and too moderate by the Chamber of Deputies. On December 27th, 1879, he resigned, and was replaced as Minister of Foreign Affairs, and as President of the Council by one of his colleagues, M. de Freycinet. At this juncture he refused the offer of the London embassy, and paid a visit to Italy, where he was received by the King (March, 1880). He was appointed Ambassador at the Court of St. James's in succession to M. Tissot, in July, 1883, and up to the time of his death retained the position. He was also President of the General Council of the department of the Aisne. He was a Protestant, and married to the Countess, whose late mother, the wife of the Chevalier, was a Wedgwood. M.
